Barclay Patent / Report of Mr. Jeremy Lack

Dear Mr. Bailey,

I refer to your letter of January 15, 1986, and I have now received a letter from Mr. Lack who apparently is now living in Oxford. I would like to quote the essential parts of the handwritten letter:

"..., the copies do not contain all the results of my mass spectrometric/gas chromatographic investigations. Would you require a copy of all of these? In fact, depending upon the nature of your interest I could give you full computer information on the analysis I undertook.

Therefore if you would be so kind as to explain to me the reasons and the nature of your request to see a full copy of my report, I will be able to compile the information in the way most (illegible) for you.

Finally, let me just stress that the investigation I undertook is of questionable scientific validity. Although all my experiments are reproducible and I worked with controls, the apparatus I had was far from professional and I only used small sample groups."

Please let me know whether I may disclose the reason for my request and the name of our client.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Felix H. Thomann
